Canberra office up and running

THE UNIVERSITY of Wollongong opened a centre in Sydney in July to forge stronger links with appropriate professions and the community.

As an extension of this policy an office has been established in Canberra to service the ever-expanding circle of graduates and prospective postgraduate and undergraduate students.

This office will also provide a meeting room and secretarial support for university staff who are in Canberra on business, and consulting rooms for the University's Centre for Technology and Social Change.

Ms Anne-Marie Cooper has been appointed to assist prospective students in Canberra and act as a resource for school career advisers. She will be located at the new office.

Ms Cooper has had considerable experience assisting students to make choices about their tertiary options.

She worked for 14 years at the Australian National University in Canberra in the Registrar's Division and in the Admissions Office assessing Australian and overseas qualifications and advising prospective students on courses and prerequisites.

The University's Canberra Office is located at 5 Geils Court, Deakin, in a building also occupied by the International Development Program of Australian Universities (IDP) and the Australian Vice-Chancellors Committee (AVCC).

University staff wishing to book the facilities for meetings in Canberra should ring Vicky on (06) 2858317.

SIR Arvi Parbo, the chairman of BHP and the Western Mining Corporation, visited the University last week. He met with students in Engineering and Geology in a semi-formal forum where students had the opportunity to ask questions. Sir Arvi is shown talking to Professor Tibor Rosgonyi, Dean Faculty of Engineering.

A RECEPTION for former University students and staff was held in Canberra on September 17 at Old Canberra House, in Acton.

The reception was organised by the University's recently-formed Alumni Association.

The association is seeking to contact graduates throughout Australia and overseas to provide them with information about the recent expansion of the University and initiatives in the areas of research, introduction of courses, campus facilities and technology transfer.

Alumni get into the ACT

ty's best ambassadors.

'They can interpret the University to the wider community, inform prospective students and help to prepare those graduating for their future careers,' she said.

'It is in their interests that the University prospers because the success of the University adds value to their degrees.'

The reception was hosted by the Vice-Chancellor, Professor Ken McKinnon.

Alumni Officer, Juliet Richardson, who was at the reception, said former students and staff are the University's

Centre for Staff Development looses its 'Mr Wit' — John Murray

THE CENTRE for Staff Development's graphic designer John Murray has taken pre-retirement leave and will not be returning to the University.

Head of the Centre for Staff Development, Dr John Panter, said Mr Murray would be spending a few months roaming around Australia, searching for a new home.

'Some will remember John's superb posters, which, plucked from notice boards as soon as they appeared, have become collectors' pieces,' Dr Panter said.

'Many others will recall the meticulous craftsmanship applied to all jobs he undertook. He is probably one of Australia's best educational graphic designers, with extensive experience in a number of secondary and tertiary institutions.

'His knowledge of all aspects of art, craft and design is encyclopædic.

'We were fortunate to retain his services for nine years, one of the longest periods he has worked in one place.'

Dr Panter said that the people who worked with Mr Murray on a daily basis had a particular reason for regretting his departure.

'Many people have commented on the cheerful atmosphere of the centre,' he said.

John Murray — early retirement

'John was a major contributor to this happy state of affairs.

'Where John is, laughter is never far away.

'His shafts of wit were invariably well-aimed, but never hurt the target, who often laughed the loudest.'

Dr Panter said Mr Murray's enquiring mind should be the envy of students of all ages and rank.

'It never rests, but probes into most corners of human thought,' he said.

'His knowledge of some of these corners often verged on the disconcerting.

'No expert could ever relax when expounding a discipline in his presence. John could always be relied on to provide sharp and critical comment, plus an uncomfortable question or two.'

Two-weeks teaching English in Beijing

A GROUP of Wollongong students and staff, together with five teachers from South Coast schools, taught English for two weeks in Beijing in July.

The group worked in a vocational high school which prepares students (aged 16-18) for employment in the tourism industry.

The Chinese students undertake a general high school curriculum with a substantial English language component as well as some specialist vocational work.

Helping to develop ability in spoken English was the main task of the Wollongong group.

The students were a pleasure to teach, being well motivated and lively. They were looking forward to their first jobs which were to be in the Asia Games Village immediately after the Wollongong group left.

Senior educational administrators and teachers were enthusiastic about similar future visits and wider professional co-operation with Wollongong staff and students.

The group was accommodated in a 50-room hotel, which is part of the school.

Visits to places of interest in and around Beijing were arranged including the Palace Museum (Forbidden City), the Great Wall, the Asia Games Village and the University of Science and Technology.

It was a pleasure to renew acquaintance with staff members of that university who have visited Wollongong in recent years.

Government policy in Beijing, as elsewhere in China, is to play down the events of 1989.

Nowhere is this policy more evident than at the Asian Games Village, where rehabilitation of China's international image has meant a vast outlay of resources.

Although Australia will not be represented at the Games (September - October 1990), the group was urged to see China as a friendly and responsible neighbour state.

Tjenka Murray at work on a large tapestry

Creative Arts graduate wins prestigious WA award

CREATIVE Arts graduate Tjenka Murray won the prestigious Genesis Moora Woolcraft Award in Western Australia with a large tapestry, The Tree Planting.

The tapestry was one of her textile pieces presented for her final assessment.

Tjenka had received valuable professional advice in 1989 from tapestry weaver Diana Conroy, who was artist-in-residence in the Textile Department and later as the weaving progressed, by keeping in touch with her.

Textiles lecturer, Liz Jeneid said the work took 420 hours to complete, which included designing, dyeing, weaving and finishing the tapestry.

'The freshness and exuberance of image and joyful use of colour, give the viewer a feeling of witnessing a celebration of some kind,' she said. 'Students in the textile department are encouraged to look at ways of supporting themselves after graduating by having work experience in art related areas during the course, showing work in student exhibitions and entering competitions.'

Banners advertising conferences and events seen recently around campus, have been the work of two third-year textiles students, Darren Parsons and Penny Watts.

Another two third-year students, Michelle Williams and Claudia Pastens, are working on a commission from architect, Marie Agrums, to create fabric for wall panels and cushions to be used in the foyer of the National Mutual Insurance Company in Wollongong. It is expected that the work will be installed by December 1, 1990.

Visual arts biennial shows off teachers' work

THE 1990 School of Creative Arts Visual Arts Staff Biennial and postgraduate research conference was opened last week by Vice-Chancellor, Professor Ken McKinnon, in the Long Gallery.

Exhibitors include full- and part-time School of Creative Arts teaching staff, technical staff and artists-in-residence for 1990.

Paintings by Tie Hua Huang, from China, and Charles Reddington, from the US, who both held one-person exhibitions earlier this year, are on show.

Current artist-in-residence Katherine Nix is displaying hand-made, three-dimensional paper works. Lyn Brunet also has used paper in her sculpture.

José Aerts has 20 coloured photographs, focussing on the human figure.

Sue Rowley is showing photographs of her young daughter in a ballet school.

Bert Flugelman is showing small and medium sculptures, while Lindsay Duncan and Peter Shepherd explore the male torso in clay and paint. Joan Chapple has on display her beautiful stolls for church use.

Liz Jeneid has combined three-dimensional construction and photography in her exhibition.

Others with works on show in the biennial are Diana Wood Conroy, Anne Ferguson, Calire Cavanna, John Telford, Richard Hook, Barbara Zerbini, John Senczuk and John Everleigh.

The exhibition is open to the public until October 14, Mondays to Fridays 9.30am-12.30pm and 1.30pm-4pm, and on Sundays 1.30pm-4pm.

TWO Bachelor of Creative Arts graduates, Ren Stallard and Sandy Inglis, are holding an exhibition in the Union Bistro from October 11-November 9.

The exhibition, called 'Deux Foix', will feature oil paintings and works on paper by Sandy and Ren's works on paper.

The Bistro is an apt venue for the exhibition as Ren and Sandy designed and refurbished the room.

University Union secretary/manager, Noel Diffey, will open the exhibition at a cocktail party on Thursday October 11 at 6.30pm.

THE NEXT meeting of the Women's Issues Group will be held at 7.30pm on Tuesday September 25 in the Board Room of the Union Building.

The first talk will be 'Girls and Non-Traditional Study and Work in the Illawarra' and will be presented by Associate Professor Noleen Kyle, Deputy Head, School of Learning Studies and Coordinator of the Equity Education Program.

Publicity officer for Prime Television,

What's On

Ms Sue Currey, will then speak on 'Women in the Media'. Cost is $2.50 per head. Enquiries to Moira Bowman, tel. 843741.

THE GRADUATES Group of the Friends of the University is holding a reunion for all graduates and graduands from the Department of Languages at the Graduation Dinner on October 11.

The reunion, to be held in the Kemira Lounge of the Union Hall, will cost $30 which includes fine food and wine.

For further information contact the Executive Officer, of the Friends of the University, Graeme Gilbert, tel (042) 270169, or Mavis Miller from the Graduates Groups on (042) 962671.
